Poems by Miss CAROLINE SYMONS, who died in England, in 1803, at the age of fourteen.

ON A BLIGHTED ROSE-BUD.

Scarce had thy velvet lips imbib'd the dew, And nature hail'd thee infant queen of May:

Scarce saw thine opening bloom the sun's broad ray,
And to the air thy tender fragrance threw:

When the north wind enamor'd of thee grew,
And by his cold rude kiss thy charms decay.

Now droops thine head, now fades thy blushing hue:
No more the queen of flowers, no longer gay.

So blooms a maid, her guardian's health and joy,

Her mind array'd in innocence's vest:
When, suddenly impatient to destroy, Death clasps the virgin to his iron breast.
She fades—The parent, sister, friend deplore The charms and budding virtues now no more.

WRITTEN IN WINTER.

Aerial Flora, sister of the spring, Arise, and let thy blooming form be seen: Haste! play thy youthful fancies on the green,
And from thy hand ambrosial odours fling.

Invite the sylvan choir to wake and sing, While the sun sleeps in gold upon the scene:

To dress the grove thy clustering hare-bell bring,
And chase hoar-winter with thy sprightly mein.

Then shall sweet zephyrs and prolific showers

Succeed to parching winds and beating rain,
With their soft balm re-animate the flowers, And strew gay cowslips o'er the golden plain:

Then frost no more shall waste the roseate bowers,
But Flora, crown'd with sweets, her sway unharm maintain.

ON SPRING.

Thron'd on soft clouds, his locks with hawthorn bound,

Twirl'd with young rose buds jocund spring appears;

The little violet by his smile he cheers,
And teaches primroses to bloom around.

To his pleas'd ear the birds their carols sound,
And near his feet its head the sweet briar rears:

Nature exults to see her darling crown'd,
And all the living scene his power reverts.

The hill & valley with bright verdure spread,
The infant Ceres in her verdant gown,
The various plants which open in the mead,
And fanning gales his genial presence own.
But soon the rage of summer shall succeed, And scorch the sweets, which breathe in Spring's soft lap alone.

THURSDAY, December 21.

ON THE JOINT RESOLUTION,

Approving the conduct of the Executive in relation to the refusal to receive any further communication from Francis Jas.
Jackson.

In committee of the whole Mr. BASSET in the chair—

Mr. GHOLSON said that notwithstanding much had already been said on the subject before the committee he hoped he should be pardoned for occupying a small portion of their attention. The resolution before us, (said he) seems to embrace several objects pre-eminently entitled to the dispasionate consideration of congress—objects altogether unconnected with those factious and political dissensions which have unhappily too long prevailed amongst brethren of the same common family and which may one day prove fatal to political liberty.— The first question which presents itself in the investigation of this subject, involves on the one hand, said Mr. G. the veracity and dignity of the American government, and on the other the character and reputation of a British envoy and in some degree of the British ministry.

In my remarks on this subject, (said he) I consider it regular to commence with the origin of the mission from Great Britain to the United States, out of which has arisen the present unpropitious posture of the affairs between the two countries. What, sir, were the circumstances under which that mission was dispatched here? In the month of May last, it was known to the British ministry that a commercial arrangement had been made by their envoy resident here, (Mr. Erskine,) with the American government, but under the allegation that it was made contrary to instructions it was no sooner known than it and the minister making it were disavowed. Mr. Jackson was then sent to substitute Mr. Erskine the disavowed agent, and at the time he, (Mr.
Jackson,) was sent to this country, it was well known by the British ministry that the government of the United States stood solemnly pledged to the American people to maintain in, and that they had inviolably and steadily adhered, to certain PRINCIPLES in our differences with England—a surrender of or departure from which would be a sacrifice of the honor and best interests of this nation.

Yes, sir, when they well knew that in the affair of the Chesapeake our executive would not, and the voice of almost the whole nation had pronounced that he ought not to make the first advance to a reconciliation, Mr. Jackson was charged not only to require the first advance from us, to wit: that in the document which should contain the adjustment of that affair, the revocation of the president's proclamation of 1807, interdicting the British armed ships from our waters, should be recited as an indispensable preliminary; but to require from us also the violation of the principles of our naturalization laws, by insisting on the surrender of foreigners who had become naturalized. As to the orders in council, we know not what specific propositions he was charged with in relation to them. As far as we are able to deduce any thing from facts before us, it must be understood that the British government had determined to accept of no conditions for the repeal of the orders in council, except such as had been previously declared on the part of the American government to be inadmissible. Notwithstanding what has been said by the gentleman from N. York, (Mr. Emott,) I think it is easily to be demonstrated that the British government did not intend to make any arrangement different from that contemplated by the celebrated instructions of the twenty-third of January, transmitted to Mr. Erskine. If the British government so recently as May last, disavowed an arrangement, and recalled its minister, under an allegation that he violated his instructions, was it to be supposed that they would in two or three months so far change their policy as to authorize an arrangement on the same principles they had just rejected? Certainly not, sir. It is evident that such an accommodation could not have been designed, because Mr. Canning says that such measures must be adopted as should secure the objects of the orders in council. That they did not by this mean the mere continuance of the non-intercourse law as to France, is manifest; for Mr. Canning says to Mr. Pinkney that a repeal as to Great Britain would be a repeal as to the whole world unless the British navy were to be permitted to enforce the law interdicting intercourse with France by the seizure of such vessels as should be found violating it.

Again—If it was the intention of the British government to recede from the grounds taken, to wit: the requisition of a continuance of the non-intercourse law as to France, a surrender of the colonial trade, and allowing the British navy to enforce a law of the U. S. would not the minister sent here to perfect the arrangement have been instructed to take a different ground from that previously insisted on? It seems to me perfectly clear that he would. From this obvious view of the subject, I hope I shall not be charged with trespassing on that decorum so earnestly recommended by gentlemen on the other side of the house, if I say, that Mr. Jackson was sent here both to offer terms and contend for principles insulting to this nation—and I demand of gentlemen whether this conduct can be considered in any other light than as a premeditated insult? They were apprised of the ultimatum of this government as to the orders in council and the affair of the Chesapeake. The terms offered had been declared over and over again by our government to be such as this government could never sanction.

These, sir, were the circumstances under which the mission commenced. What were those which characterized its progress & termination? I think it very easy to shew that the conduct of the minister himself, after he arrived, partook strictly of the same character as the conduct of the ministry who sent him. I think I have shewn that the disposition manifested by the ministry in sending him here was insulting to this country. Let us next enquire into the character disclosed and the conduct displayed by that minister after his arrival. And in that enquiry, without wading through all the documents, which gentlemen can as well understand by perusing them in their chambers as by hearing them read here, I will merely advert to the offensive expressions used by Mr. Jackson, and to the manner in which those expressions were met by the secretary of state. By doing this it will be very discernable not only that the facts stated in the resolution are sustained by the correspondence, but that the resolution does not go so far as facts would warrant. In Mr. Jackson's letter of the 11th of Oct. he says, that the arrangement with Mr. Erskine was made under such circumstances as could only lead to a disavowal.
If the circumstances were such as could only lead to a disavowal, they must have been dishonorable, and Mr. Jackson, by intimating that our government had a knowledge of these circumstances, charges it with being particeps criminis. Can any thing be more palpable than this? He expresses this idea in still stronger terms when he intimates that Mr. Smith had a principal agency in the misconduct on this occasion. It certainly was not in Mr. Smith's power to substitute conditions for those which he declined accepting, but it must have been done by Mr. Erskine. But notwithstanding this, he charges Mr. Smith not only with conniving at a conduct improper in itself, because it could only lead to a rejection of the arrangement growing out of it, but insinuates that he was the principal actor in the scene. In Mr. Smith's letter in answer to Mr. Jackson the animadversions are too clear in their object to be mistaken. Mr. Jackson is informed of the displeasure of the American government at such insinuations; and in the very first letter which was written by the secretary of state, he disclaims pointedly having had any knowledge whatever of the deficiency of Mr. Erskine's instructions at the time of making the arrangement. And what says Mr. Jackson in reply? He says again, that Mr. Erskine's instructions were known to Mr. Smith. Sir, I acknowledge very candidly that on a superficial perusal of the correspondence, the charge of falsehood, from the art and adroitness with which it is wrapt up, does not appear so palpable as when it is more closely examined. Yet, sir, notwithstanding all knowledge of the insinuations had been denied by Mr.
Smith, Mr. Jackson reiterates the assertion that they were known. Do gentlemen say there is no insult in this? That there is nothing wrong in the assertion of a knowledge on the part of the secretary of state which he had before formally and solemnly disclaimed.

SPANISH DECLARATION OF WAR AGAINST DENMARK.

FROM THE SEVILLE GAZETTE.

ROYAL EDICT

On the Declaration of War of Spain with Denmark.

Don Ferdinand the 7th, by the grace of God, King of Castile, Leon, Arragon, of the two Sicilies, &c. and in his royal name, the Supreme Central Governing Junta, of the kingdom of Spain and the Indies—to those of my council of war, vice-roys, and captain generals of my armies and provinces, captain generals, lieutenant generals, field marshals, brigadiers, and other officers of my armies and royal navy, assistants, in-tendants, governors and officers of forts, and other persons of whatever class, situation or condition they may be, of all cities, villages and towns, of this my kingdom of Spain and the Indies, to all whom it may belong, of this my Royal Edict, know that with this date, 18th Oct. I have thought right to forward to the senior of my supreme council of war, the following decree:

Spain at the present period, at the height of glory which her valor and magnanimity has acquired her, cannot any longer see, without compromising her honor, with indifference, the hostile acts of the Danish government. Their want of liberty, and the oppression which they suffer on the part of the French, cannot serve them as a justification or excuse towards the court of Spain.

One of the means which this nation avails herself of to obtain her views, was to draw from Spain a part of the Spanish army, sending it to Hamburg, and from thence to Denmark; where they afforded the soverign of this latter kingdom, and even the French in the war in which she was employed, those services, which all Europe has seen, which ought to be expected from their discipline and valor, with as much glory as detriment to themselves, of which sufficient proofs are given by the loss of many men in those frozen regions. At the moment that the part of the Spanish army which was in Denmark, heard of the noble resolution of their countrymen, to shake off the French yoke, and declare war, they took the noble resolution, which is very rare in history, to abandon that country, and to join their countrymen in their own country, flying to the assistance of the brothers facing dangers, to participate in the glory, which they were acquiring—memorable example of the unanimity and agreement of sentiments, which reigns among the Spaniards, although they may be separated by great distances. The marquis of Romana who commanded this body, not doubting of the valor, constancy and patriotism of the soldiers, allied by the zeal of the officers, and their general consent, departed with the greater part of his troops, re-uniting them in the island of Langeland, from whence they embarked for Spain by means of the efficacious assistance which the commandant of the British naval forces stationed in those seas afforded him.

The delicate procedure of the marquis la Romana, and his precaution to avoid any thing which might have the appearance of hostility against the Danish government, and to maintain, on his side, the good harmony which existed between the two courts; he was indispensably compelled to attack some Danish boats to take possession of the fortress of Niberg, which was to protect the flight of his army. The English admiral took upon himself to attack and deliver them up.

If Denmark had remained neutral at this period, not opposing their departure, nor endeavoring to retain this body of troops, Spain, constant in her system of delicacy and scrupulousity, would not even yet take harsh measures against Denmark, nor would break the ties of harmony and good friendship which exist since an unmemorable period between the two nations; but late incidents confirm the active part which either by will or compulsion, his Danish majesty has taken in the war of Spain against France.

Denmark was opposed to the departure of the Spanish troops from her territory, and if they did not obtain their wish, it must be more attributed to their want of means, or the endeavors of the Spanish troops to execute their resolutions, than to the will of that court who adhered to the coalition system with France, and blindly obeyed the orders which the emperor of the French dictated. A clear proof of this is, in not receiving a charge des affaires from Spain, at Copenhagen, and the answer of count Bernstorff, signifying that circumstances did not permit him to hold any correspondence with him. This was adding insult to injustice. Mr. Edward Burke, the Danish minister, was, whilst this happened, tranquil, and respected at Madrid, yet he departed from that place, abandoning his employment, and following the French at the end of July 1808, which evidently proves their adhesion to France, and renunciation of correspondence with Spain.

Denmark yielded their naval and land force to France; their fortresses serve them as a wall, and an asylum: the Spanish vessels cannot freely navigate their seas, and much less enter their ports to trade with them, nor even have them as an asylum against tempests, and a portion of Spaniards are detained in their forts as prisoners, and in a word, Denmark is, without a formal declaration, at war with Spain. What more can one power do than declare war to another, whom she judges her enemy? Spain is convinced that Denmark, neither for interest or friendship, nor for any motives, enters cheerfully into this contention. Spain is convinced that Denmark being governed by the force or influence of France cannot throw off the yoke which she has fixed on her—a yoke as hard and arbitrary as if she had been a conquered nation; and that, if Denmark was free she would not act hostily against a nation of which she has no complaint, but on the contrary many motives to cultivate a good understanding.

But Spain must answer to Europe and all the world for her conduct. It appears that she ought to have no consideration with a nation

with a nation of whom she has received so many injuries, having committed acts of hostility against the individuals of the nation, against their commerce, and navigation. Spain consulting her generosity, waited a year that Denmark might decide more conformable to her interest and duty; and Spain, consulting her dignity, cannot delay any longer from taking a step which she is compelled to by her honor, decorum and greatness.

Whether Denmark considers herself independent and with the faculty of acting freely, or whether Denmark is oppressed and subject to the will of Napoleon—Denmark is no longer in peace with Spain. Spain declares war to her, in the first place as a power by whom she feels herself injured, and secondly, she does so as to a province of France. Denmark is responsible to God, the world and humanity, for the blood, which in this contest, will be spilt—likewise responsible for the losses and damages which will take place, and for the fate of the rest of the Spaniards who forcibly remain in her territory. Spain, and her government, in the name of their beloved sovereign, Ferdinand the 7th, perfidiously detained in France, declares that she has ceased all communication with Denmark, and that the ties of friendship which united them, gives liberty and authorizes the Spanish troops, vessels of war, and private vessels to attack the Danish forces wherever they may be found, to take their vessels in every place, revenge their received insults and not to cease hostilities until a mutual agreement has taken place between the two powers by treaty in which shall be stipulated the conditions of peace, and put an end to a war which Spain solemnly declares to the world she gave no cause for, but rather endeavored to avoid. And for the evils resulting, the aggressor is responsible, as she unjustly gave occasion to the misunderstanding which has taken place. Let it be understood in the council and chamber of Castile, for the convenient effects.

CHARLESTON, January 3.

Arrived, ship Charles Carter, Drysdale, St. Ubes, 36 days. On the 26th November, the day before the Charles Carter left St. Ubes, Mr. O'Neil, the vice-consul, received a letter, giving an account of two severe battles between the French and Spaniards, in which the latter proved victorious. The consul read to Captain Drysdale an extract from the letter, and promised him a copy of it, but Captain D. sailing early next day, he did not procure it. The time and places where the battles were fought, cannot be recollected by Captain Drysdale. A British major in St. Ubes, informed that he had just received over land despatches from Cadiz, which stated that two line of battle ships, and twenty sail of transports, with troops for the relief of Barcelona, were fallen in with and captured by Admiral Duckworth's squadron in the Mediterranean. Verbal accounts mention that the Spaniards were in great force advancing towards Madrid. Sailed in co. with the ship Suffolk, Thompson, for New York. On the 22d of December, lat. 39, long. 74, spoke the brig Lydia, Burger, from Providence, R. I. bound to Havana, out 6 days.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 12.

DAVID S. GARLAND, Esquire, is elected a Representative from the state of Virginia in the Congress of the U. S. to supply the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of William C. Nicholas, Esq.

MR. SNOWDEN,

IN your paper of the 8th of this month I have read the heads of a petition intended to be presented to Congress praying certain alterations in our laws for the furtherance of justice. I do not object to any of the contemplated provisions, and wished it had gone further. One alteration proposed is that real estate should be made liable to execution in the same manner as personal estate: This is certainly in principle correct—I am of opinion that all the property of a debtor ought to be made liable for the payment of his own debts—But while I make a debtor's property responsible for his own debts I think that there ought to be some qualification in the law as to a debt which a man may owe as security for another—That his real estate should not be liable for such claims, until the estate both real and personal of the principal has been exhausted.

I beg leave to draw the attention of the petitioners to the consideration of the propriety of also including in that petition a request that Bank Stock, Road Stock, Marine Stock, Bridge Stock, and ground rents, may be made equally liable to be executed and sold for the payment of debts. Many persons in this town have the whole of their property vested in the stock of the different incorporated institutions in the District.

EQUAL JUSTICE.

Foreign Influence.—After a number of general remarks, under this head, Mr. Elliott, one of the editors of the Freeman's Journal, says—"We have received information through two or three distinct channels, which we deem of high respectability and pure integrity, that Mr. Jefferson during several of the late years of his presidency, carried on a private correspondence with the emperor of France, which was for a time concealed even from the secretary of state (Mr. Madison) and his private secretary (Mr. Coles) but was at length made known to both, and that Mr. Coles, when he went to France, carried a packet of this character, separate from the diplomatic despatches with which he was charged. Such is the nature of our information upon this subject, that we will not make an 'insinuation,' but assert it as an undeniable fact. If Mr. Jefferson and Mr. Coles will deny it, we will consider ourselves arraigned before the grand tribunal of the public, for having asserted an important fact respecting those two gentlemen upon erroneous information, and will, at once, either confess ourselves guilty, and implore mercy, or put in our PLEA OF JUSTIFICATION. It is but fair, however, to forewarn them, that it is at least a thousand to one we shall prefer the latter course.—No such denial will ever be made, because they will not deny the truth."

(N. 2. Com. Advertiser.)

Virginia Legislature.

THURSDAY, January 4.

The Committee of Propositions and Grievances have according to order, had under their consideration two petitions to them referred, and have come to the following resolutions thereupon:

Resolved, as the opinion of this committee That the petition of the President and Directors of the Little River Turnpike Company, praying that an act may pass, vesting in them the same powers with regard to the valuation of materials, for repairs, as for making their road, and authorizing them to augment their capital stock, is reasonable.

Resolved, as the opinion of this committee,

That the petition of the president and directors of the Leesburg Turnpike Company, praying that an act may pass authorizing the said company as the first part of their labour, to erect substantial toll bridges over Broad Run and Goose Creek, where the contemplated road will cross those streams, is reasonable.

Congress of the United States.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, January 11.

[Taken for the Alexandria Gazette.]

Mr. Lewis, from the committee to whom was referred the message of the President covering the report of the superintendent of public building, reported a bill making appropriations for certain purposes therein mentioned. Referred to the committee of claims.

Mr. Newton, from the committee of commerce and manufactures, on the petition of Levin Jones, reported favorably.

A message from the President covering a report from the Director of the Mint, was read, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Tallmadge, from the committee on the military establishment of the U. S. reported "A bill authorizing a detachment from the militia of the U. S." This bill authorizes the drafting 100,000 men from the militia of the U. S.—Volunteers may be accepted instead of drafts, and when so accepted, to remain in service for 6 months from the time they arrive at the place of rendezvous. The President may call out a part or the whole of those troops, as he may think necessary. The act to continue in force for two years and no longer. Referred to a committee of the whole house on Tuesday.

Mr. Johnson, from the committee of claims, reported a bill for the relief of Richard Taylor. Referred to a committee of the whole house on Monday.

Mr. Johnson from the same committee reported on the petition of James M'Cracken, that the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted. The house agreed to the report.

Mr. Johnson also reported on the petition of Elizabeth Hamilton—that they consider her claim just; but as it was barred by the statute of limitations, they are therefore agreeably to the rules they have laid down in such cases, under the necessity of reporting that the prayer of the petitioner ought not to be granted. The report was referred to a committee of the whole house on Monday.

The house then took up the unfinished business of yesterday—the report of the committee on the contested election of Jonathan Jennings.

LANDS

Near Alexandria to be Rented.

I WILL rent on moderate terms, to approved tenants, the whole, or any part of the following

VALUABLE PROPERTY.

160 acres comprehending that beautiful island called Belliste, and upwards of 60 acres of marsh adjoining; the soil is excellent, and well adapted to the cultivation of oats, Indian corn, vegetables and grasses; the marsh would afford a fund of manure for the adjoining lands, and is capable of being converted at an expense probably not exceeding 2000 dollars, into a watered meadow of inexhaustible fertility. The island has been joined to the main by a substantial causeway, abounds with wild fowl, and affords two excellent fishing landings for shad and herrings, which from their proximity to three rising cities, have been fished for several seasons past to great advantage. The improvements are a young apple orchard, a timothy meadow, and a house for the accommodation of fishermen.

140 acres situate on the east side of the Washington and Alexandria turnpike road, and distant about 1 mile from Alexandria, 5 from Washington and half a mile from the river. This property is under good enclosure, and will be divided into a number of handsome lots, well adapted to grass, gardens, or country retreats.

60 acres bounded by the western side of the said turnpike; will be divided into lots of a convenient depth, some of which will be sold in fee simple, affording a delightful view of the Potomac and Annapolis rivers; of the navy yard and the cities of Washington, Alexandria and Georgetown.

120 acres situate about a mile from Alexandria, and extending nearly a mile on each side of the Georgetown turnpike road. The whole of this tract lies remarkably level, and may be converted into grass lots, and meadow, equal to any in the county.

30 Acres adjacent to the Federal Spring, near the country seat of captain William Harper. A great part of this tract is prime meadow land; the situation well calculated for a retreat, or for a place of public entertainment, possessing the advantage of some excellent springs, and a fine picturesque prospect.

500 acres, situate between the new George-Town turnpike and Leesburg road, 150 acres whereof are arable and meadow land, the remainder woodland. Upon the premises there is a small but convenient dwelling house, situate on a commanding eminence, with kitchen, laundry, ice house, smoke house, corn house, stables, overseer's house, and other convenient out houses, a choice selection of fruit trees from the best nurseries, many of them in full bearing, consisting of the finest pears, peaches, apples, plums, cherries, plums, almonds, apricots, mulberries, &c. with walnuts, grapes, strawberries, currants, and other heretofore productions, a never failing spring of water, and a meadow below the hill, lately sown and well set with timothy. In point of salubrity of air, beauty of prospect, fertility of soil and pleasantness of situation, this tract is equalled by few in the district.

ALSO,

For sale, or to be leased on ground rent for ever,

Upwards of 700 Building Lots, situate in the northern district of the town of Alexandria, partly on Queen, Columbus and Alfred streets, near the Episcopal church, and partly on Washington, Madison, Oronoko and Fairfax streets, among which are about 40 Lots fronting on the river, where the channel is bold, navigable and well calculated for wharfing.
